THE CHINA MAIL. HONGKONG, FRIDAY, JAN. 4, 1878.

1877. (Continued.)

In the month of May there were only two events worth noting—the admission of Mr Ng Ohoy, the first Chinese barrister, to practice at the bar in Hongkong, and the presentation of a memorial on the currency question to the Governor of Hongkong, signed by most of the British and foreign firms in the Colony.

Mr Ng Ohoy has since accepted the offer of an engagement as legal adviser of Li Hung Chang, in which capacity he ought to be able, with his Western lore and experience, to render valuable service to his country.

In regard to the memorial, considerable discussion arose about this time through the Chinese merchants complaining that the firms and banks here would only receive chopped and broken dollars at a discount, and requesting that weight might be adopted as the basis for money transactions, irrespective of colour or the mutilated condition of the dollars.

The foreign firms were, on the whole, opposed to any such concession, and the memorial in question was addressed to the Governor giving expression to this opposition.

Subsequently the Hongkong Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution at a private meeting recommending the Colonial Government to make chopped dollars, weighing not less than 7.17, and neither pierced or out, a legal tender. The whole matter was, we believe, referred home, but was practically settled by the local Bank conceding the point to the Chinese.

On the 4th June two more of the mosquito gunboats, built in England to the order of the Chinese Government, arrived at Hongkong. These boats are a novelty in their way, being of very small tonnage, and armed with only one monster gun of twenty-five tons. The Chinese Government now possesses four of these craft, whose advantages in actual warfare have yet to be demonstrated.

The first Chinese civil marriage in Hongkong was celebrated on the 7th May. There is little to note in July, except the excessive heat, the thermometer on the 6th marking 96° degrees Fahrenheit. During the following month, August, five places of call were opened on the Yangtze in accordance with the provisions of the Chefoo Convention. On the 23rd an address was presented by the Portuguese community to Mr A. G. Romano, late Acting Consul General for Portugal, expressive of sympathy with that gentleman on the appointment of some other Portuguese resident as Consul General. Mr Romano had discharged the duties of Vice Consul General and Acting Consul General during a large number of years, and was extremely popular among his countrymen here. Under these circumstances the appointment of another resident to the post, who, so far as we are aware, had no previous experience in the work of the Consulate, naturally excited some disgust, especially as it was believed the step was the result of priestly influence at the Portuguese Court. We are now very glad to hear that Mr Romano has been reinstated in the office. Nothing demanding comment occurred during September.

The Woosung Railway was closed for traffic by the Chinese authorities, this action having been taken, if report be true, in the face of strong representations from the British Government. The rails have been taken up, and there seems to be no doubt that this undertaking is to be removed to Formosa. Mr O. B. Bradford, the United States Vice-Consul General at Shanghai, was found guilty of opening letters entrusted to the American Mail, and sentenced to fine and imprisonment. Subsequently he was charged with other serious offences to which he pleaded "technically guilty," and which, at his own request, to be investigated at Home. Mr J. O. Myers, late Consul General at Shanghai, but who had been removed from that office in the early part of the year by the American Minister at Peking, "inspired" the San Francisco papers about this time with certain disclosures respecting American consular and diplomatic matters in China, and it is now asserted that Mr Myers has been reinstated in his former office.

Another remarkable evidence of the awakening of China to the demands of progress and the exigencies of the age was the publication in this journal in November of a translation of the more interesting portions of the prospectus of a proposed Chinese Mining Company under the patronage of the powerful minister Li Hung Chang. An English engineer has just passed through Hongkong to take service under the Company, of which an influential committee of direction has already been formed. A terrible boiler explosion occurred on board the steamship Yesso in Hongkong Harbour on the morning of the 22nd Nov., and the first and third engineers are now awaiting their trial on a charge of manslaughter. The loss of life was great. Messrs Douglas Layrak & Co., the agents of the steamer, have given the handsome sum of $10,000 towards the relief of the sufferers and their relatives. The Chinese Envoy to Japan arrived in that country on the 30th Nov. The events of last month were of an ordinary character.

REUTERS TELEGRAMS. [SUPPLIED TO THE "CHINA MAIL."] (By Southern Route.)

THE WAR. LONDON, 1st January, 1878.

The Channel Squadron has received orders to be in readiness for sea. The 90th Regiment (Perthshire Volunteer Light Infantry) has been ordered to the Cape.

British troops have crossed the Kei. There is no news of importance from the seat of war.

THE WAR. LONDON, Jan. 3rd, 1878.

The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (Lord Derby) in reply to a deputation on the subject of the present war in Europe, stated that England was fully determined to have a voice in the settlement of the Eastern Question.

There is still no news of importance from the seat of war.

There is terrible distress in South Wales owing to the closing of some of the principal iron-works.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

The steamer Stentor was to leave Singapore for this port this morning.

We have to acknowledge the receipt of Mr Mayers' new work on Chinese Tiles and Banks. The annual Customs Returns are also to hand.

We regret to hear that the Chief Justice, Sir John Smale, is indisposed, and will probably be confined to his room for some days. Several cases set down for hearing may therefore have to be postponed.

Our readers will not fail to observe the programme, published in our advertising columns, of the Choral Society's Concert, to be given on Thursday, the 10th inst., in aid of the Chinese now suffering from the Famine in the North. The bill of fare speaks for itself, while the object is unquestionably one worthy of the most liberal support.

We learn of two robberies from foreign houses, one at the East and the other at the West side of the town. It is clear that plate and spoons are at a premium among the thieving gentry, and that they are making desperate attempts to increase their stock. House-servants are again said to be "in the swim," and it is to be feared that most of those house robberies are concocted and carried out with the connivance of those who are paid to protect the property stolen. There appear, however, to be a gang or two of "old hands" on the road; and we would again suggest that extra vigilance be exercised by the Police authorities as regards known and suspected characters. It is most unfortunate, at the same time, that the recent leniency on the part of H. E. the Governor seems to have so sadly failed in the object which doubtless was honestly entertained, and that known rascals now crack jokes with the Police on their probable early return to the pleasures of the prison.

A MEETING of Justices of the Peace was held to-day at the Magistracy, to take into consideration an application made by Mr J. B. White, to remove his spirit license from the Stag Hotel to No. 1 D'Agular Street, and an application from Mr Jesse Cook for a fresh spirit license for the present Stag Hotel, to be known in future as Watson's Hotel. The following gentlemen were present: Messrs Charles May, James Russell, C. V. O'neagh, and C. O. Smith. Mr O'neagh, as acting superintendent of Police, had nothing to advance against either of the applicants, but he said he thought it had been already decided by the Justices that the Stag Hotel should be closed, as soon as an opportunity of this sort offered. Mr White's application was refused, but Mr Cook's is to receive the consideration of the Justices at their next meeting. Mr Francis appeared on behalf of Mr Watson, the proprietor of the Stag Hotel.

Ten Artificers or working Engineers (numbering about thirty) belonging to the numerous vessels of Her Majesty's Navy now in port, held a meeting at the Temperance Hall on Tuesday (New Year's night). After enjoying an excellent dinner the Chairman proposed the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, and the toasts of the Admiral, the Commodore, and Mr Robb, Chief Inspector of Machinery, were enthusiastically received. The Artificers are a very recently created branch of the service, and on the present occasion they discussed their position in the service. Some dissatisfaction appears to prevail owing to the very meagre accommodation provided for them on board ship, and the men naturally feel a little aggrieved at the want of consideration shown them by the Admiralty, despite the recommendation of a Parliamentary Committee which has had this subject under discussion.—Communicated.

PROFESSOR THORN'S entertainment at the City Hall last night was of a very high order of merit—surpassing in many particulars Kellar's performances. The card tricks were marvellously well done, and were only eclipsed by those with the empty box, and the disappearing bird cages and birds. In the sack trick, Professor Thorn's assistant gets into a sack, which the audience are freely permitted to examine, and is apparently securely fastened thereto by the mouth of the sack being firmly tied round by a member of the audience. Hardly, however, is a light screen thrown over him before he succeeds in freeing himself from the sack, the fastenings on the same having, so far as can be judged from personal handling, remained as before. The Professor in the course of the evening took about half a dozen live pigeons, several glasses of wine, and a large number of other articles that it would be impossible to squeeze into a small compass, from a box to all appearances empty. Some facial contortions, aided by about a ten seconds' operation behind a looking-glass, were splendidly done. They were representations of various misery characters, and there could be no deception about them. Professor Thorn will give his last entertainment on Saturday evening, under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor, when no doubt he will be more largely patronized than last night. The performance ought not to be missed.

H. M.'s 28th Regiment will, we believe, parade at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning, and will embark on board the troopship Tamar at 9 o'clock. In the absence of Colonel Dickens on leave, the Regiment will be under the command of Captain Duce, the senior officer, whose duties as acting Superintendent of the Gaol will be undertaken by Captain Dempster, who remains behind with one of the Companies of the Regiment.

deputed to perform Garrison duty. These Companies are the 2nd, Captain Dempster and Lieut. Beckham; 5th, Captain Moore and Lieut. Lloyd; and the 7th, Captain Webb and Lieut. Pilkington and Inverness. Lieut. Wilford also remains here as Fort Adjutant.

In addition to the customary expressions of regret at the departure of a Garrison Regiment, we are certain that we speak for the community in saying that the Officers and rank and file of the 28th carry with them the hearty good wishes of the residents here. The Officers have so closely identified themselves with the public life of our small Colony that quite a blank will be felt when they leave us. In every sport and amusement they have taken a prominent part, and the most perfect harmony and good feeling has ever prevailed between the Colonists and their defenders. It may be said that their presence, in one or two instances—notably those of the Athletic Sports and the Regatta—almost saved us from a failure in our public amusements. The generosity with which they have acted, under the leadership of Mr. Hurst, has always been most willingly granted to promote the recreation of the public, in beyond all praise; and few of the present residents will readily forget the charming moonlight promenades which owed their origin to the liberality of the 28th Officers. The general esteem in which the Officers of the Regiment are held will, we understand, be expressed by the community in the form of a presentation of plate. An appeal has been quietly made but most liberally responded to for this purpose; and we do not presume that we are in any way committing a breach of confidence by recording the fact, and heartily supporting the movement. We wish the gallant 28th a pleasant passage down, and a prosperous career wherever they may go.

[Since writing the above, we have heard that a telegram has been received from Colonel Dickinson, and that, as the gallant 28th is expected to arrive here on Sunday, the embarkation or departure of the Regiment may be postponed for a day or two.]

INQUEST.

THE "JESSIE JAMIESON" CASE.

The adjourned inquest on the body of Thomas Schmidt was resumed this afternoon before James Russell, Esq., and a Jury, comprising Messrs P. Jordan, M. J. Grose, and F. Guedes.

Capt. West, further examined, said: I made one mistake yesterday in my evidence; the date on which Schmidt's legs were found to be bad was the 15th November, not the 4th. The entry was transferred from the Mate's log, but I cannot say when I made the entry in my official log. I gave the crew nothing but what was provided by the Act, when they got sick. I treated them with every kindness.

By Dr Wherry:—I have always seen the lime juice measured out in the cabin mixed with sugar and served out to the crew at one bell. I am sure each man got his allowance and more; never less. If any one did not take it, his share would be divided between the others. I saw it poured into half pint mugs to each man; some would take it away and some drink it right off. The two men on board who are sick are both foreigners. All the sick men lived at the forward end of the ship. They had the same provisions as those at the stern, the best that could be got in England. There were 11 casks of pork and 11 of beef. I have got some of the beef; there were not two qualities. I produce a bottle of lime juice.

By the Coroner:—There are eight bunks in the fore-cabin; the fore-cabin is well ventilated. I have always given men the same kind of provisions ever since I have been to sea. The quality has not been so good always.

Dr Wherry: Vegetable diet is a great preventive of scurvy failing this lime juice. It would be interesting to know how many days they were actually without lime juice.

By Mr Guedes:—The men had a gallon of water per day until I found that it was likely to make a long voyage, when they were put on three quarts, and then on two quarts. We caught a quantity of rain and then I could afford to give them more.

Dr Wherry was next examined; he said: I am Superintendent of the Government Civil Hospital. The deceased was brought to the Hospital at 3 p.m. of the 1st, along with three other men said to be from the British barque Jessie Jamieson. He was in a dying condition, and died at 2 a.m. on the morning of the 2nd. His gums were in a dreadful condition; there were blotches on his feet which looked somewhat puffy.

I made a post mortem examination and found his internal organs, especially his liver and kidneys, in a degenerate condition and his heart was in a fatty condition apparently from the excessive use of stimulants. He had evidently been in a weak state of health for some time. I think the immediate cause of death was scurvy. There are still three men in the Hospital suffering from scurvy. One named Linkins, a native of Ceylon; he is in a debilitated condition, one of his legs is much discoloured, and in an ecchymotic condition. Paries is also very debilitated; his gums are puffy and blotched, and a good deal of discoloration apparent about the knees; he complains of not being able to eat anything hard. The three men in Hospital are not, in my opinion, in danger. Keamer is the worst case of the three; his gums are very spongy; he has lost some of his teeth and others are very loose; his lips are very puffy; his body is blotched, and his legs discoloured, and he has a large ulcer on one of his legs. I cannot say it arose from scurvy; it may have done so.

In answer to the Coroner:—I do not think that the eating of the fish would bring on scurvy; I only think it is an indication that they did not have sufficient food of another kind. I have looked at the lime juice, but without an analysis I am unable to judge as to its quality. Judging from the evidence which I have heard, I should say that the scurvy was brought on by the men neglecting to take their lime juice. If the lime juice were good and men took it in proper quantities with the food provided by Act of Parliament, I think it improbable that scurvy could have broken out. The meat which we have just viewed I consider to be good wholesome food.

Edwin Church Ward, the Chief Officer, re-examined, stated:—We first began to give the men lime juice on the 23rd July. I have an entry in my log-book to that effect. I write my log-book every day at one bell. None of the men refused to take it on that day, which was the tenth after leaving port. The first refusal was on the 29th August. (This evidence was much the same as the Captain's.) The entries from the log, to show the number of days the men were without lime juice, were then read, and went to show that deceased had been the longest without it, and Keamer, the man whom the doctor said was the worst of the three now in Hospital, the next longest; but one of the men, Morgan Evans, who totally escaped the disease, was also a very long time without it. The witness further stated that one of the casks of beef was condemned by the captain. Witness further said he had been over six months on a passage, but had never seen a case of scurvy before. He was very fond of lime juice, and so far as he could judge the lime juice on board the Jessie Jamieson was good. On this occasion they were 172 days at sea. He had been always going long voyages, and he attributed the outbreak to eating too much salt provisions and so much grease or lard. He knew that some of the men eat a good deal of lard. Paries and Keamer eat a lot of it. He had never seen vegetables given on board ship as a regular thing, he knew what sour krait was and believed they used it on the German Ship. He gave Inspector Grimes the bottle of lime juice, the Inspector saw him take it from an open cask, the beef was taken from two barrels.

By Mr Jordan:—When the men got sick they were supplied with preserved provisions. Nobody got a double allowance of lime juice until the 2nd December, that was some time after the disease made its appearance.

Continued:—None of the men ever made any complaints to me or the Captain about the provisions, but I incidentally heard Paries say that he had not enough. I saw him standing at the galley door with a piece of beef in his hand asking the steward if he thought that was enough for four men. I believe that the disease may be ascribed in a great measure to the men having come off a long voyage when they shipped with us. I know Schmidt (the deceased) had come off a long voyage and he told me he had not been long on shore. From what he told me I believe he had been only a fortnight on shore, and part of that time in Hospital. I do not mean to assert that all these men were all a short time on shore, but I know that sailors are as a rule only a short time on shore. The Captain has got their old discharges, which will show the date of their leaving their last ship.

Johannes F. Wydekop, the cook and steward, sworn, stated that he was a native of Amsterdam, and shipped on board the Jessie Jamieson on the 10th July. He served out the provisions and he opened a cask of beef on the 13th July the day they left. It was finished on the 4th August. The cask was not very good because the pickle had run off. Continued: I don't eat much salt meat, I don't like it; I live in the cabin; there is always a little difference between the food forward and aft. All the casks he opened contained good beef. They used all that was opened except the last cask. There was a complaint made about the beef once; Ludlins complained shortly before he got sick. He said it was bad meat, when it was cooked the skin turned black, witness ascribed this to the saltpetre. He used to put the skin off before he gave it to the men. One cask of beef was condemned by the Captain; it was black. Each cask of beef is 800 lbs. weight of beef and pork 200 lbs. The meat is weighed out to the men and an allowance in made to them for bone. Of course when you buy a cow the bones are inside. I served out the lime juice, I used to measure it with a measure taken from the medicine chest and poured it into a jug adding half a pint of water for each man and 2 oz. of sugar for each man. I then served it out to the men on the poop half a pint to each man. The Captain and officers got theirs in the same way at dinner. There are 64 doz. bottles of lime juice still remaining on board; a bottle lasted from three to four days. Keamer had no teeth in his mouth and could not eat any food; quite he used to eat a good deal of scurvy; I pulled two out for him about six weeks ago.

The enquiry was then adjourned till 10 a.m. to-morrow.

Police Intelligence.

(Before James Russell, Esq.)

Jan. 4, 1878.

GAMBLING.

Lum Ahn, a coolie, was sent to one month's hard labour, as a rogue and vagabond for gambling in the public streets. A double cash called "lo tin" was found in the prisoner's pocket and was used for cheating at "fan tan."

CUTTING TREES.

Lum Ahn, a gardener, was fined $5 for the above offence.

DROWN.

John Sinclair, a seaman unemployed, was charged with being drunk and insensible. Defendant admitted the charge, and was cautioned and discharged.

STEALING VEGETABLES.

Cheng Ahn, a rice-peddler, was sent to 7 days' hard labour for stealing vegetables at Fraya West.

(Before the Hon. C. May.)

THE CUTTING AND WOUNDING CASE FROM SHANGHAI.

Edward Smith, a seaman, late of the British ship Shannon, who was sent down here under a warrant from the Supreme Court of Shanghai, was again charged on remand with cutting and wounding one of his shipmates named George Wiles on board the ship Shannon on the 25th November. George Wiles, the man who had been wounded, stated that he gave his evidence at Shanghai, and signed his deposition, the same having been read over to him. The prisoner was the man he then called Samson. The wounds, the prisoner inflicted were now healed, and he showed the marks on the neck. In reply to the prisoner he said he had had no quarrel with a man the name of Smith (better known as Yarnmouth) before he quarrelled with prisoner. Smith (he said) was very drunk and wanted to fight, and we were in fun with him. Witness did not recollect prisoner saying "leave him alone, he is drunk." Witness denied striking prisoner before he was stabbed, but acknowledged having done so after his wounds were dressed.

John Holloway and Solomon Todd both swore to the prisoner's identity, and acknowledged the depositions, which were produced, to be the same they had made before H. M.'s Consul at Shanghai. The prisoner reserved his defence, and was committed for trial at the Supreme Court.

December 8.—Left (Hongkong) this morning. Traversed 95 ft. by noon, Lat. 21.22 N. The Captain ascertained the distance travelled by means of the log-line (H. E. then described the mode of working it). The rate of speed, according to the Captain's statement, was 24 in an hour. The distance was 24 miles. At noon every day, and observations taken to verify the ship's position from the Equator by means of the sextant. We observed a number of fishing junks, which had sailed spread and were gliding up and down with the waves. We knew from this that we were near the South of Hainan.

December 9.—Noon to-day traversed 881 ft. Lat. 17.80 N. According to calculation, we should be about 200 or 300 ft. to the South of Hainan, and at a place which those on board called the China Sea. There were plenty of flying fish, each about several feet in length. They jumped up from the water to a height of about a fathom and then dived down again. Passed near the islands, where birds of the sea were to be found, as also seals, but they were of an inferior quality. These islands are within Chinese territory, but they are barren and uninhabited. There was a fellow passenger on board, an Englishman, named (?) Pattison. He had made a circle round the world and was returning to his country. I learnt that his sole object was travelling, and he was a wealthy man in England. The same night it rained and the weather was as hot as summer; blankets could not be used.

December 10.—It rained; at noon traversed 852 ft. Lat. 13 N., passed Cape Varella, the South-Eastern territory of Annam. Dr. Macartney showed me the English Budget for 1875. Revenue of England during the year was about £210,000,000; of India, about £160,000,000; of Australia, about £10,000,000; of the Straits Settlements about £1,000,000; of Hongkong only a little over £100,000, while the expenditure was over £100,000.

December 11.—Rain; at noon traversed 939 ft. Lat. 8.10 N., distant from Saigon 450 ft. Saigon is a French possession taken from Annam, and is within the district of Kia Ting Foo; approach to it from the sea is by the River Mekong. Travelling from Hongkong Southwards, the weather has been increasingly hot, and rainy. In Shanghai, the thermometer stood 53 degrees, and in Hongkong it was 65 degrees, but here it stands at 81. Cotton garments cannot be used, and all on board wear only thin dresses.

December 12.—Rain; at noon traversed 835 ft. Lat. 4.3 N. on the sea of Siam. An Italian, named A-la-ne (I. Barattone) was a fellow passenger. I learnt that he was a merchant in London, and had come via America to Japan and visited all the ports in China. He, too, had made a circle round the world; he was a nobleman in his own country, having been decorated with a first-class order. The foreigners pay great attention to commerce, and this is an instance; his companion, Sing-na-kat-ko, was also an Italian.

December 13.—Rain; at 11 a.m. traversed 720 ft. arrived at Singapore, situated in Lat. 1.20 N. Early this morning passed an island called Hornburgh, where there was a light-house. Hornburgh was the name of the first foreigner who came to China to explore. Dr. Macartney informed me that the Chinese map of the Yangtze had arrived in Singapore before us. As soon as we arrived, the Chinese Admiral Choy Kwok Cheng and his brother Kwok Hee, accompanied by the Hon. Mr. Whampoa, (his Chinese name is Woo Sun Chai) a native of Whampoa, came on board to make their calls. Lat Chew Man (the Customs Tactist at Tientsin) had a letter for Mr. Whampoa, and I took the opportunity to deliver it to him. The Governor, Sir William Jervois, sent a military officer with two carriages to receive us, and to request us to delay our landing until 4 p.m. as he had to send to the different garrisons for a guard of honour. I thereupon arranged that we should first pay a visit to Mr. Whampoa's garden (H. E. then described all the animals he saw there in the shape of a Chinese trap, and accompanied by the Assistant Envoy Liu, and Secretary Lay, I went to the Government House, where we were received by Sir Wm. Jervois, Lady Jervois and the two Misses Jervois. From Sir William's manners, his reception of us was still warmer than Sir Arthur Kennedy's. Lady Jervois, an illustrious and virtuous lady, welcomed us most cordially. On our return we paid a visit to the Fort. It was built on a hill, and was in two divisions. In the centre there was a place for the officers, and there were four barracks for the soldiers, each giving accommodation to over a hundred men. There were two sets of married quarters, one for the accommodation of the married officers, and the other for the married soldiers. Behind the barracks were the kitchen stores, two messing rooms, one school-room, and one hospital. There were ten large guns, and a powder magazine. The smaller guns were placed to embrasures on carriages, and there was a large telescope; on the highest point of the wall in front of the officers' quarters, there was erected an observatory. The discipline and order to be seen here differed in the highest degree from those in a Chinese fort. The soldiers comprised artillery and infantry. The infantry carried muskets and is auxiliary to the artillery. The officer in command of the artillery was named Mackay.

The officer in command of the Infantry was named Lum Chi. The soldiers were divided into two grades: the first grade soldiers received pay at the rate of $1 for three days each man, and the second grade at $1 for four days each man. The married officers received sufficient pay to maintain their families. The wives of the married soldiers worked in washing and sewing clothes, and lived on their own labour. This fort was the one on the north of the hill, and overlooked the town. There was another fort on the south.

December 14.—Rain and thunder. Sir William Jervois again sent carriages to receive us, and placed his Interpreter Mr. Pickering at our service. We went first to the Yang-woo. The yards were manned and guns fired. As we stepped on board Capt. Luxmore, the Naval Instructor, escorted us round and showed us everything minutely. He took us to the School room, where 12 gavel instructions to 20 students. He drilled the gunners before us, and held a review of the marines. As we left, the yards were again manned and a salute fired. Mr. Pickering escorted us to the garden belonging to the Hung family; it was the public property of the Chinese community. (Here followed a description of the different curious things to be seen there.) When I was at Hongkong, some one suggested to me to pay a visit to the Public Gardens; to this I replied that I ought to look into their system of true Government rather than to take pleasure in strolls and sights. But here I incidentally came across such wonderful things, and I felt much gratified. On our way home, we passed the Court-house. The Judge in office then was Mr. Phillips. He happened to be sitting at the time to try cases, and I and Mr. Liu were accommodated with seats by his side. The Bench was raised about five feet from the ground, and under it was a long table in the shape of a crescent. Around this sat the lawyers, the Registrar and the Interpreter. Facing the Bench, were two wooden railings, and I was told the space between was for the accommodation of witnesses. There were eight seats for those engaged in the litigation. Beyond this was the place for the spectators. There was no torture, and yet there was perfect order, and solemnity, without the slightest intimation of noise or wrangling. There were in this Colony a College and five schools, including one for girls. But as Sir Wm. Jervois had arranged to return our call at 8 p.m., we were unable to go to see them. The population of Singapore was about 200,000, of whom there were 2,000 Europeans, 10,000 Malays and Indians, and the rest were Chinese and Fokienese, with Cantonese predominating. Mr. Whampoa informed me that the number of Cantonese had already reached 70,000. The jurisdiction of the Governor extended to three settlements; Malacca on the west, and Penang further west. Penang is an island and the place to the west of Malacca and opposite to Penang is the province Wellesley, which comes under the jurisdiction of the Governor. In Singapore there were two men-of-war at anchor at the time, viz. the Juno, Captain Poland, and the (?) Magpie, Commander Anson. Sir Wm. Jervois called at 4 p.m., and the vessel got under weigh immediately after.

DIARY OF THE WAR.

(Compiled from the Daily Papers.)

Friday, Nov. 16.—A telegram from Yeran Kala, the Russian head-quarters in Armenia, states that General Helmann has commenced the siege of Erzerum. News from Erzerum is to the effect that the Russians captured the Fort of Agiz, but were subsequently driven out at the point of the bayonet. The Russians have established their administration in the district of Erzerum. At Kars there has been considerable fighting without any gain to the besiegers. The Russians have sent a flag of truce to Ghaz Osman, and a complimentary message to suggest that the time had come when he might capitulate and ameliorate the condition of his army. Osman, however, repulses the offer, and has not yet exhausted all his means of defence. There has been a great flight of the population from the Southern part of Bulgaria. A Russian dispatch from before Plevna states that the Turks have made repeated reconnaissances near Elena, and that they are harassing the Russian outposts on the Osman Bazar road. In the Schipka Pass they are continuing the extension of their batteries opposite Mount Nicholas.

Saturday, Nov. 17.—Between midnight and five o'clock on Thursday morning the Turks made three successive attacks upon General Skobelev's position before Plevna. According to the official account they were defeated with great loss, while the Russians had only 100 Turkish soldiers were wounded. About ten Turkish battalions were engaged. There is a report, which requires confirmation, that a Serbian corps under General Horvath had effected a junction with some of General Gurko's troops near Pandirolo, on the Serbian frontier. All the defenses of Antivari have been captured by the Montenegrins, with the exception of the principal fort, which still holds out, although damaged by the bombardment.

Monday, Nov. 18.—Kars is in the hands of the Russians. The battle preceding its capture, says the official despatch, went on throughout Saturday night, commencing in the dark at eight o'clock, and terminating at eight o'clock yesterday morning. Mehmet Ali, who has been collecting an army with a view to cover the route of the Caucasus from Plevna, if such a step should become necessary, has arrived at Sophia. Several slight engagements are stated, in a Russian despatch from Bogot of Saturday's date, to have taken place on the 14th, 15th, and 16th. On the 15th and again on the 16th General Skobelev sustained injuries from fragments of Turkish shells; but his hurts were not so severe as to prevent him continuing to direct the fire maintained against the Turkish positions.

Tuesday, Nov. 20.—The further particulars that have come to hand respecting the fall of Kars fully confirm the earlier news respecting the complete victory of the Russians. According to the Globe, seven thousand of the Turkish troops were made prisoners, a part of the garrison having unsuccessfully attempted to force a way towards Olta. In spite of the news the Russians are still before Erzerum, where all the inhabitants are being armed for the defence of that place. Heavy losses have been sustained by the Russians in an unsuccessful attack upon the Turkish positions near Orkhanie, commanded by Akir Paacha. Three hundred Turks are reported to have violated the Austrian frontier near Glavanika on Saturday, where they first fired on one house, and then on a house, and drove off forty-two persons and a horse. Fort Volvira, before Antivari, has been captured ed by the Montenegrins, who have destroyed the Durbent bastion. The greater number of Turkish houses in Antivari are reported to have been reduced to ashes by the bombardment. The latest news respecting the attitude of Serbia represents that a rupture with the Porte is imminent.

Wednesday, Nov. 21.—The Moscow Gazette of yesterday states that the main Russian army which captured Kars is advancing upon Erzerum after leaving simply a garrison in that fortress. The Russian official dispatch recording the capture of Kars, states that 10,000 Turkish prisoners were taken after the fall of the fortress, and that 4,500 sick and wounded were found in the hospitals. The Russians lost 2,500 in killed and wounded. Several superior officers were among the killed. As a result of the occupation of Kars the Russians are now contemplating a march westward, through Armenia, to Soutra. 17,000 men are to be detached from the army at Kars, and sent to assist in the siege of Plevna. The only information the Porte has obtained of the fall of Kars has come through the foreign Embassies at Constantinople. A letter had arrived from Huseini Paacha, the Turkish commandant, reporting a sortie, and subsequently the capture by the Russians, and the recapture by the Turks, of the Hafiz Paacha redoubt, involving a loss to the Russians of 1,500 in killed and wounded. Ohakir Paacha reports from Orhanie that reconnaissances have shown that the enemy is at a long distance from that place. He has also reported to the Seraskier that in a cavalry engagement near Orhanie the Russians were defeated with a loss of 500 killed. Fort Nephaz, commanding the town of Spiza, which surrendered on the 16th inst. without offering any resistance, is reported, in a telegram of yesterday's date published in the Politische Correspondenz of last night, to have been captured by the Montenegrins.

Thursday, Nov. 22.—An official Russian despatch of Tuesday's date, from Bogot, states that on the 19th inst. the capture of Kars was celebrated by a religious service performed in the presence of the Emperor, in the Tutehanita redoubt before Plevna, against which place, after the service, all the Russian batteries fired salutes. After a ceaseless three days, the Montenegrins have captured Rahova, from which the Turks escaped in the direction of Widin, but are being pursued. It is reported from Constantinople that on Monday last Salem Paacha left Lelick and marched towards Pyrgos, in order to reconnoitre the Russian positions on the Jantza and the head-quarters of the Czarowitz. While he destroyed two of the Russian lines of entrenchment, Ibrahim Paacha carried the Russian fortifications on the Matchka heights after a desperate struggle. Pyrgos was set on fire and the Russian lost fourteen hundred men. The Russian official report of the same matter represents their losses as being very much smaller, but states that Pyrgos was reduced to ashes. From Erzerum it is stated that the Russian engineering works have been interrupted by the Turkish cannonade, and that some small detachments of Russian cavalry have been observed patrolling the plains in various directions.

THE BESSEMER PROCESS.

The Bessemer process is one of the most picturesque and striking in metallurgy. When first invented, it was recommended as a substitute for other processes (puddling, etc.) which involved much manual labour, and its great capabilities of improvement in respect of mechanical economy have fairly taken the world by surprise. The interior of a large Bessemer establishment like that of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, is as impressive as a cathedral. The two great converters (or "pans," as the Germans call them, in allusion to their shape) are mounted side by side on a platform above the general floor. They swing on trunnions, so that they can turn their mouths upwards to receive a charge, or downwards to discharge it. The charge furnaces for the preliminary melting of pig-iron and spiegel are usually behind the converters and at a still higher level, so that when trapped the molten metal may flow through a runner into the mouth of the converter. All the heavy operations are conducted by hydraulic power. Let us ascend, at one side of the great hall, the platform or pulpit where a couple of men stand behind a row of levers, controlling by a touch the movements of the ponderous converters and of huge cranes here and there. The pumping-engines and blowing-engines are out of sight, in another room. This hiding of the causes gives to the effects an appearance of magic. A "blow" or "heat" is about to commence. One of the converters turns slowly on its axis, until its mouth is on level with the platform. Immediately the converters and a molten iron appears from the obscurity of the recess behind in which stand the cupola furnaces, and flows rapidly through a moveable gutter into the mouth of the vessel. A workman at one side touches a lever, and the converter, which has lain, as it were, on its side to drink in its glowing charge, swings into a vertical position, with its mouth directed towards the throat of a large chimney behind and over it. An instant before, however, a touch upon another lever has caused the monster to begin to roar and to belch a yellowish flame. This is the effect of the combustion of silicon by the blast, which is delivered under a pressure of fifteen to twenty pounds per square inch through the hollow axis of the vessel, down its side in an exterior pipe, and finally through its perforated bottom into the mass of fluid iron. After five or six minutes, the flames grow white and intolerably brilliant. The carbon is burning, and with so much intense ebullition that particles of melted iron and finely-divided slag are thrown out in showers of sparks. Six minutes more, and a quieter flame, with bluish tinge and still greater heat, indicates the last stage of the conversion. Suddenly the flame shortens with a jerk, as if the monster had drawn in his fiery tongue. With an almost human air of exhaustion after its fit of fury, the converter rolls back upon its belly to drink, by way of cordial, its final dose of spiegel. This produces a brief internal combustion, but it is soon digested, and the heat is over. Nothing remains but to pour five tons of liquid steel in a dazzling, almost transparent, incomparably beautiful stream, into the ladle, which delivers it in turn to the ingot-moulds. A Bessemer blow is perhaps the most imposing spectacle which metallurgical industry can present. The apparently automatic movements of great masses, the overwhelming display of vehement chemical reactions, and of light and heat in consequence, and finally the rapidity of the whole process, which can be seen from beginning to end in twenty minutes; combine to render it unique as a "sensational" exhibition. The sudden shortening of the flame at the end of the last fraction is so decided that the precise moment of its occurrence may be distinguished from a distance of miles.—Atlantic Monthly.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA.

Mr Sala can hardly be described as a novelist. He is rather the representative journalist; the man pursued by the spectres of Copy, and yielding his soul in a vain attempt to satisfy the gruesome visitant. As a journalist he has many remarkable qualities. He does not shine in argument; for this is not a logical mind; nor is his exactly one of statement, for he is of a discursive habit, and "loose in his gait, looser in his gait," he loves to linger by the way, to dive down cunning lanes, to pull bilberries in the hedge, to do anything, in short, that will serve him as an excuse for loitering, that will oblige for an instant the necessity of transcribing in such strength forward, square-shouldered wise, as was the wont—let us say—of Charles Dickens. His fluency is amazing, his facility incomparable, his memory inexhaustible. He has a camera in his eye, and a private stenographer is attached to either lobe of his brain. He is a sort of latter-day Mnesemone; not the muse as she was carved of the Greeks, white and round and radiant, but the muse as the needs of the 19th century—this babbling, curious, enervated 19th century—have modified her. In him is incarnate that observation with attentive view which the late Dr Samuel Johnson, engraved in a celebrated couplet, and not only does he survey mankind from China to Peru, a sort of journalistic Ahasuerus, hurried hither and haled thither as the needs of able editors advise, but he has probed by it, and can tell you as much about any section of it as you would care to know. With the nameless mysteries of this great and evil city he is as familiar as was his master and idol, the man who wrote out those wonderful bits of London for "Oliver Twist" and "Our Mutual Friend." He has lived in Russia, and has told us all about it in most pleasant terms; he has sojourned in Constantinople, and knows a great deal more of the unpeopled Turk than Mr. Gladstone himself. He can talk of Paris in such a familiar strain, as make us long sometimes to have the command of millions that we might retain him specially to read with us "Farragut," "La Comine Bette," "Le Cousin Pons," "La Pere Goriot," and to pilot us through the labyrinthine intricacies of the city that Balzac loved so dearly and honoured so splendidly. He is at home in New York and in Dublin, in New Orleans and on the Right, in Mexico and in Milan, in Santiago de Cuba and in Capri, in Vallombrosa and in Versailles, in Salerno and in Syracuse, in Berlin and in Barcelona. Great cities are as magnets to him, and like a splinter of steel he flies to them.—London.

The following anecdote of the "Sailor King" was told with great glee by him at a dinner-party given by George the Fourth, at the Cottage, Windsor Park, in 1837. It is to be observed that William the Fourth, when Duke of Clarence, used frequently, during his residence at Bushy Park, to ride out unaccompanied by any servant. "I was riding in the park, the other day," said his Royal Highness, "on the road between Teddington and Hampton Wick, when I was overtaken by a butcher's boy on horseback, with a tray of meat under his arm. 'Nice pony that of yours, old gentleman,' said he. 'Pretty fair,' was my reply. Mine's a good 'un too,' rejoined he, and 'I'll trot you to Hampton Wick for a pot of beer. I declined the match, and the butcher's boy, as he struck his single spur into his horse's side, exclaimed, with a look of contempt, 'I thought you were only a muff!'"
